

NLP Exploratory Project

Creating and testing a machine learning model to predict emotion in text

This dataset contains tweet data. This includes raw text, dates and an assigned emotion to the text. The goal of this project is to use this input data and create a model to predict the emotion of new tweet inputs. first we will explore the dataset and clean it, then we will create a model to predict emotion on tweets.

Exploration

Textblob is used to calculate the sentiment score for each tweet. We then look at the sentiments per emotion category to understand the distribution.

We will clean text, perform sentiment analysis and extract keywords for each emotion. We will create a Wordcloud

In [372... # Sentiment analysis
from textblob import TextBlob

```
In [379... def get_sentiment(text):
    blob = TextBlob(text)
    sentiment = blob.sentiment.polarity
    if sentiment > 0:
        result = "Positive"
    elif sentiment < 0:
        result = "Negative"
    else:
        result = "Neutral"
    return result

Word Cloud

Next we will make a word cloud with the words for emotion of Joy, using `joy_docx` we have created.

In [402... from wordcloud import WordCloud
```

```
In [403... def plot_wordcloud(docx):
    mywordcloud = WordCloud().generate(docx)
    plt.figure(figsize=(20,10))
    plt.imshow(mywordcloud,interpolation='bilinear')
    plt.axis('off')
    plt.show()
```

```
In [313... plot_wordcloud(joy_docx)

Machine Learning

Taking the tweet text and emotion dataset to create a model that will predict the emotion in the text provide a confidence level. We will use the sci kit package
